Date 1 1

Subject (in full) Japanese Naval Men - recreation area extended.

Made by D.S. Sansom Forwarded by Thos Robertson Supt

On April 2nd, 1933, the Officer i/c Japanese Naval Barracks, Gordon Road, informed Bubbling Well Road Station, that :-

"Every Saturday, Sunday and on Japanese Memorial Days the Japanese Naval Men will be allowed to stroll in B'Well, Louza, Sinza and Central Districts, and the Japanese Authorities will have their patrols out to maintain order."

A Naval Patrol, five strong, carrying pistols, bayonets and batons was observed by the undersigned walking east on the footpath of Nanking Road, near Honan Road, during the morning of April 2, 1933.

EGGS THROWN AT JAPANESE MARINES

There was a certain amount of excitement near the corner of Nanking Road and the Bund at 5.30 p.m. yesterday when four eggs hit a lorry in which a party of Japanese marines was travelling. The lorry was brought to a halt and ten of the party jumped out and investigated an alleyway which might have held possible assailants, but found nobody, and after a minute or two the lorry proceeded. It is believed that young members of the crew of a visiting merchant ship had been "amusing" themselves by throwing eggs at the rickshaw coolies who pestered them, and hit the lorry by mistake.
